Canada a Military Power. So long as man exists the policemen and the soldier will be necessary. If we reason by the analogy of nature, we can arrive at no other conclusion. When, Hugh Miller exhumed his armor-plated this evening. fossils from the Old Red Standstone with their spines standing straight ep he inferred that they were fighting against the sand-flood that was burying them. He even desied the traditional harmlessness of the inhabitants of the Garden of Eden ; for the fossils of the Old Red Sand-Eden; for the fossils of the Old Red Sandstone are older than Adam. Dare vin has elaborately proven that the strongest genus of plants expels the weaker. Nature appears to be made up of antagonisms. Motion itself is only a species of natural warfars, which is only another name for natural pregress. Without antagonism,—without waffare, there is no progress made anywhere. No person-no nationality can escape warfare to a greater or lesser HAS RECEIVED PER STRAMER "PELICAN." extent;—all have to play their part as warriors, either as individuals in a scuffle, or as nations on the battle-field. The individual who cannot make some shew to protect himself is a poor coot; and the nation that won't fight, soon sinks in the scale of nature. Much as moralists may talk of the greatest of all crimes being war, still international merality says it is right. The merging of septs, tribes, and clans into a large community; and the forming of many communities into one great nation is the best means known to suppress war. Yet the recent example of the United States proves that war will crop out. Even the Biblical Utopia—the Milleunium will end with the Devil disturbing the harmony of milleunial society, possibily by a rebellion. So whether we turn to science. history, fact, or prophecy, there has been, is, and will be war. There is consequently no use in attempting to escape the inevitable. It is better to be prepared for it. Now the Dominion Government made up of what were seperate communities will soon occupy all the north end of America. Beyond a slip-shod militia -sever more distinguished than in a post-prandial oration, -or by indulging in dreams of driving away the Fenians that were suppressed by the United States authorities—the military talent of and the Public Generally for their exertions in the Dominion has been latent. The preventing the fire of last night on Fort policy of the Imperial Government kept it so. The divide and-conquer principle oct2 will Son & RICKMAN. that kept the Eastern Provinces separate for fear of them declaring their independence, left to England the duty T BEG TO RETURN MY SINCERE THANKS of breeding soldiers for defence, as well toris Fire Department and Public Generally as paying them. The let-alone, live- for their exertions in removing my goods, and alone, undeveloped nationalism of the preventing the fire of last night, on Fort Provincials represented them as a class of British subjects that politically and nationally—rank them as high as you will-were only subordinate Englishmen They sang "Rule Britannia," and "God Save the Queen," and had no more part in the affairs of the nation, than the servants in the cellar-kitchen have in the pleasures and society of their masters and mistresses in the drawing-room. That time, however, has happily gone by -never to return any more. The Provincials are levelling up to the standard of first-class Englishmen. They are now taking the responsibility to defend themselves. England has united them into one nationality, and has told them that they will still be released from payment of any part of the National Debt :

dollars to construct fortresses in Canada, Mr. Gladstone said : "This guarantee was part of the price England paid for being relieved of the obligation to protect Canada by military. England had now arrived at the state of things in which Canada was to undertake almost entirely its own defence, and the pernicious system of the past was no longer to be encouraged.
Canada would be relieved in a great measure from all control, and England would be relieved from all demands upon her exchequer on account of Canada."

but for the future they must grow their own soldiers, and arm, and pay them too. When the Guarantee Bill came up the other day in the House of Commons, to guarantee five and a half millions of Gladstone's utterance is conclusive. Henceforth the Provincials become a military people. They have now a militia of 500,000 men, and 70,000 sailors, according to the statistics of the Dominion. The next thing will be a Standing Army, - and after that a Navy. When these events shall have matured, Canada will become an independent nationality. New Advertisements.

The toss for stations was Mulhausen fired on the people, killing and won by Canada, and they took the off shore side to get the protection of the islands on their way up. Then off came the browning clothing, disclosing scarlet guernseys, with arms to the very wrists; off came the whitflannels, and the Englishmen actually shone in the naked buff. Unadorned, they were adorned the most. Renforth gave himself one pull together, and a stretch like a bulldog; all their faces glistened with de-The Prussians took 2,000 prisoners in the last encounter. There were many Prussians It is stated that Lord Lyons recently sugg-sted-to Bismarck the expedience of an ar-mistice. Bismarck replied that true is would termination and confidence—the muscles in their arms and backs and the sinews of their prefer to make peace at anytime and anywhere, but no proposition looking to truce would be entertained for a moment danks, showing marvellously against the les er development of their rivals. and one of the committee officiated in that capacity for the English. The great Babel was hushed in a pause of suspense that was painful to sensitive nerves. There sat the great and illustrious representatives of two bemisphers in one of the mauliest sports of old England - one had to loose, and yet even the backers of the winners would feel sympahy and compassion for them. They each seemed too grand to be saddled with the infamy of defeat. The long musclar arms, flat backs, and powerful shoulders of the St John men, their huge seven-inch blades and bony wrists, looked incapable of defeat-but so did the Englishmen. Doubts and conjecures were not to last any longer. At the word "Go!" they got off to an even start at the first attempt; and no amount of knowledge or experience can dictate an account of this race which shall be more instructive than the brief record that the Tyne ook the lead, kept it, increased it, and wou as they liked. The race admits of no description, and calls for no remarks. Before four strokes were taken the Tyne showed in front and had cleared their length in the first quarter of a mile taking their opponents' water, and pulling like clockwork. The latter's policy was The Moniteur publishes communications here very apparent; slipping on the after edge of the thwart they brought their full sions, giving details of shocking crueities air ngth against the stretcher and rowlocks simultaneously. New Brunswick enthusiasts said "Fulton was busbanding his strength, committed by the Prussians in endeavoring to raise contributions where the people have been impoverished by former requisitions.

LONDON, Oct. 11 - I welve French ironand would soon call upon his crew, and lead to the buoy." To other spectators it was clads passed Dover to-day, bound east.
Garibaidi has exhorted the people of Nice clear that the boats had raced for the lead, and that the Canadians were doing all they and avoy to discontinue their agitation at knew.
